Gallant Custom Laboratories Inc. has now been making Autogenous Veterinary Biologics for over 14 years. The business is Canadian and 100% owned by the Gallant family, and continues to offer animal health alternatives, as it has since 1995.

Autogenous Veterinary Biologics are used to assist the Veterinarian in dealing with unique challenges in cases where the pathogenic organisms are not cross-protective or when commercial products are not available.

Gallant also offers diagnostic services, to broaden the understanding of the organisms impacting the herd or flock.

Educating Vet Students

Jackie Gallant, President of Gallant Custom Labs, gave a presentation to a room full of veterinary students at Western College of Veterinary Medicine, located in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan.

Approximately 120 students attended a lunch presentation that was organized by members of the 'Swine Club'. This club invites outside speakers to enhance and broaden the students knowledge.

The presentation introduced Auto-genous Biologics as a "great tool in the Veterinarian's tool kit". It also offered examples of their application through case studies of some common swine problems as Clostridium perfringens and Haemophilus parasuis, among others.
